

United States $10.00

LIBERTY HEAD EAGLE

1838-1907

Diameter: 1-1/8" (27 mm)

Weight: 258 grains (16.718 grams)

Composition: 90% gold-10% silver/copper (1838-73)

Composition: 90% gold -10% copper (1873-1907)

Designer: Christian Gobrecht

Engravers: Christian Gobrecht (1838-44); James Longacre (1844-68); William Barber (1869-79); and Charles E. Barber (after 1879)

Mint Marks: Philadelphia (none); Denver (D); San Francisco (S); New Orleans (O); found under the eagle on the reverse.

Obverse: Liberty head facing left wearing a coronet inscribed LIBERTY. Date (below), 13 stars (surrounding) around beaded border.

Reverse: Spread eagle holding 3 arrows in left talon and an olive branch in right. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA and the denomination TEN D. around the beaded border with the motto IN GOD WE TRUST (beginning in 1866) on scroll above eagle.

Edge: Reeded

Due to a sharp rise in the price of gold (brought on by the turmoil created by The Napoleonic Wars and Bonapart's "Reign of Terror") President Thomas Jefferson ordered that the production of $10 gold coins be halted on December 31, 1804. It would be 34 years and 2 Acts of Congress (altering both weight and fineness of United States gold coinage) before production would resume.

It was 1838 when the Secretary of Treasury instructed Mint Director Robert Maskell Patterson to begin production of $10 gold coins at once. Acting Mint Engraver Christian Gobrecht immediately began preparing dies. Using the head of Venus from Benjamin West's recent painting Omnia Vincit Amor, Gobrecht created the timeless Neo-classical Coronet Liberty Head motif which would dominate American gold coinage for nearly three quarters of a century. The reverse featured an improved version of the old John Reich eagle (in use since 1807).

The design remained in production through 1907 with only one major change. The terrible carnage and aftermath of the Civil War left many Americans in a religious and philosophical state of mind. Secretary of Treasury Salmon P. Chase was receiving a steady flow of requests that our coinage carry some reference to God. A minister from Pennsylvania suggested "God, Liberty, Law". Mint Director James Pollack offered "In God is our trust" (a line from a popular hymn). GOD OUR TRUST began to appear on some U.S. pattern (experimental) coinage. Eventually the phrase evolved into the now familiar IN GOD WE TRUST. This was officially adopted in 1866 and can be found on a scroll above the eagle.

Hard economic times and the low demand for the $10 denomination in circulation made for low mintages in the "no motto" years. Few were saved in mint state ($10 was a great deal of money). Of the surviving specimens, many fell victim to the gold recalls of the 1930's and were lost forever to the melting pot.

In 1907 the Coronet Liberty Head design was replaced by the legendary Augustus Saint-Gaudens $10 Indian Head. The Gobrecht Coronet remains an icon of U.S. coinage - a classic work of American art wrought in gold.

Premier Coin Galleries

20 Peachtree Court • Holbrook, New York • 11741 • 800-820-5006